Welcome to Mediators Meeting Online Networking Meeting. These meetings were established on March 24, 2020 in response to the need for networking during the Covid pandemic. The meetings occurred daily at 12 Noon at that time. After things stabilized, the meetings were adjusted to once per month, and they are now held faithfully on the 4th Tuesday of each month, so that there would be little conflict with other events. In late 2022, the group was suspended for a while, with the intention of restarting it in 2023. Send topics to be discussed to me directly at nelson.timken@verizon.net or put them in the chat during the meeting .

08:38:13 From Niki Borofsky | Boston/Paris to Everyone:

Please feel free to pop your questions into the chat as we progress!

08:46:31 From Diane to Everyone:

Q: do you know the work of Edwin Rutsch and The Center for Building a Culture of Empathy? They are trying to help folks build that resilience through empathic listening/dialogue.

08:47:27 From Karen Tibbals NJ to Everyone:

One of my ancestors was a British Loyalist during the Revolutionary War. He got land in Canada from the King.

08:48:19 From Marcelino Gonzalez,Fl to Everyone:

conflict problem;human disposal/population control

08:48:51 From Sara Barnes MV Mediation to Everyone:

Can you comment on how your work intersects, if it does with Peter Coleman's work?

08:54:18 From Pierre de Ravel d'Esclapon NYC to Everyone:

Would that we had again debates of ideas in a courteous and respectful manner that Bill Buckley led on Firing Line!

08:56:36 From Karen Tibbals NJ to Everyone:

It's my belief that if we learned to appreciate and talk about the values underneath our beliefs that we can have more respectful conversations and come to more resolutions (aka Moral Foundations theory)

08:56:42 From Susan Glatki - Western MA to Everyone:

in my conflict resolution class we compare the stages of genocide to events occurring in the past couple years

08:57:28 From Sally Dear-Healey to Everyone:

I would also argue that in addition to values, we need to look at underlying and often unmet needs of the parties involved.

08:57:59 From Karen Tibbals NJ to Everyone:

I've written a book on how see the Moral Foundations and how to have those conversations: Persuade, Don't Preach

09:00:46 From Niki Borofsky | Boston/Paris to Everyone:

The Experiment podcast | <https://www.wnycstudios.org/podcasts/experiment>

09:01:22 From Rabbi Bob Kaplan NYC to Everyone:

Part of conflict resilience , which I see as so essential to navigating this polarized world we live in, is to recognize and confront the level of trauma we have both as individuals and as a society, endured during these times , trauma that has been so layered by what we thought was unimaginable becoming the norm

09:04:03 From Niki Borofsky | Boston/Paris to Everyone:

09:12:16 From Lisa Pomerantz to Everyone:

Query whether we should go into these discussions with the mindset that we will hold fast to our views. Maybe we should go into these discussions with open minds? Also, although these discussions can be initially uncomfortable, can't having these difficult discussions be freeing and empowering?

09:51:46 From Peter Coleman to Everyone:

Thank you, Bob. This was a FANTASTIC talk! I would love to connect with you and talk and learn more.

09:52:05 From Karen Tibbals NJ to Everyone:

Anne Applebaum talks about how joint projects have help healed conflict in Eastern Europe. Also, the anthropologist Heinrich mentions a similar idea in his book, The WEIRDEST people in the world. I wrote about it in my newsletter:

<https://fracturedrelationships.substack.com/p/what-else-can-you-do-to-heal-fractured>

09:52:24 From Gary Ravert to Everyone:

Thank you so much. So enlightening.

09:52:33 From allanmarks NYC to Everyone:

Re-evaluating the order you spoke of seems to be the issue. The result seems to come out of the process but we have seen the results of marriage to results. It seems your presentation seems to recognize to re-examine the process itself v s. The processes we use to get us to preconceived results.

09:52:50 From Mina to Everyone:

Thanks for a very relevant and excellent presentation. Are we able to obtain your e-mail address to connect after today? Thank-you.

09:57:33 From David Kay to Everyone:

I work with Braver Angels' depolarizing model (<https://braverangels.org/>) which on a national scale finds it easier to recruit liberals than conservatives to dialogue. The question of why is complex and worth much more thought.

09:57:38 From Prabha to Everyone:

Love the question @Bathabile

09:57:42 From Michelle Brody to Everyone:

On the increase in polarization in the US over the past decades, see this chart on the Braver Angels website: <https://braverangels.org/our-story/#how-we-started>

09:58:18 From Lizette to Everyone:

Love the question -I hope Bob can expand his explanation

09:58:26 From Karen Tibbals NJ to Everyone:

Isn't the core issue the alignment of social perspectives with political?

09:58:29 From Prabha to Everyone:

It affects different people now.....that is one difference.

09:59:11 From DG Mawn/NAFCM to Everyone:

Amen Bathabile

An interesting look at application of conscious conversations that may interest this group. <https://hbr.org/2022/11/frontline-work-when-everyone-is-angry>

10:01:12 From Katerina Apostolides to Everyone:

Could it be that we need to learn how to have philosophical conversations, in which we explore things with others and pose new questions, rather than just opinion-stating to each other?

10:01:30 From Susan Glatki - Western MA to Everyone:

I think there has always been some form of division in society but I think that the immediacy of the "call out" and cancelation, and the volume and "pride" in being oppositional has increased

10:01:37 From Murray Bickerdike, Melb Aust to Everyone:

Thanks Bob, a highly insightful and interesting talk - conflict resilience is an area I will be encouraging my colleagues to discuss as we down under (Australia) find ourselves also at risk as polarisation dividing us when we need the opposite.

10:01:53 From Cheryl Prewitt to Everyone:

Thank you.

10:01:54 From Debra Hamilton to Everyone:

Thank you all especially Bob!!

10:01:55 From Niki Borofsky | Boston/Paris to Everyone:

10:10:13 From David Kay to Everyone:

Isn't part of the issue here the extent to which there are ways forward through power imbalances that don't involve or lead toward violence? Is this the "outcome" that this process is foregrounding?

10:11:33 From Bathabile Mthombeni (she/her) Binghamton, NY to Everyone:

I'm thinking about what it means to put Conflict Resilience in the context of a diversity of tactics.

10:14:14 From Prabha to Everyone:

<https://mediatorsbeyondborders.org/what-we-do/conflict-literacy-framework/>:

This framework is designed to build conflict literacy and resilience, and provide a suite of available services and resources. Each module includes basic knowledge of a particular subject area as well as tools and approaches for engaging in internal and external conflict. The aim is to invite users to invest in the realization that conflict literacy can be constructive and generative, and will help them better achieve their mission.

10:14:45 From Prabha to Everyone:

Its a sensibility and a set of skills.
